

Individual Contribution Report - Dumebi Ijomah

Throughout the development of our budgeting app prototype for Group 8, I, Dumebi Ijomah, made meaningful contributions to the projects success, particularly in the areas of documentation, team collaboration, and feature explanation. I took part in writing and explaining several of the apps features in the final report, focusing on clearly describing what those features do, how users can interact with them, and how they connect to other parts of the application. I made sure that the content I worked on was written in a clear and structured way, helping the reader understand both the function and the purpose of the features. In addition to that, I collaborated closely with my team in brainstorming sessions where we worked to improve the user experience, navigation, and visual design of the application. I shared ideas that contributed to better user flow, such as simplifying how a user adds an item or navigates between pages using icons and side menus. My involvement went beyond just writing I was present in every team discussion, actively supported our presentation by explaining some of the features in depth, and always made myself available to support the team in any way needed. I focused on improving not just the technical accuracy but the overall clarity and quality of our submission. I am proud of the effort and dedication I brought into this project and believe that my contributions made a valuable impact on both the final product and the teams collaboration.
